Then it's time to find out about TotalMobile Solutions...

In 2009 Independent Data Corporation expects there to be 878 million mobile workers worldwide. This amounts to approximately 27 per cent of the total workforce. Many businesses are looking at implementing mobile technology to boost productivity and improve the work/life balance of their employees.

TotalMobile – Your passport to the future

Mobile working is about much more than simply keeping in touch with employees who are on the road. It transforms the way in which you serve your customers. It improves efficiency, all day, every day. And it produces real cost savings in a range of areas, from paperwork to spending on fuel. Cost savings, incidentally, that can amount to hundreds of thousands of pounds or even millions, depending on the size of your organisation.

If you already know about the benefits of mobile working, read on to discover why TotalMobile is different. If you don't, please allow us to introduce you to the future.

TotalMobile – the potential financial benefits

Typical elements that can be measured include:

- Number of appointments per day
- Percentage of productive time per operative
- Percentage of tasks completed first time
- Consumption of materials, fuel, consumables etc.
- Improvements in customer satisfaction, staff morale
- Improvements in BVPI results

Don't just take our word for it...

"Just by replacing paper job tickets an authority the size of Swindon Commercial Services can save around £20,000 per year on printing and paper, not to mention the environmental impact" Rob Fyfe – Swindon Commercial Services
